April 2018

As you know, we place great importance on preparing our children for the digital world – its benefits and its hazards.

Our children are very young, but never too young to develop good e-safety habits. Many of them already use a range of digital and interactive technologies each day, either at home or at school, and a number do use online spaces and resources which bring them in contact with the wider world of the Internet.

As parents, you will already have put in place e-safety filters in your home systems, as well as setting down the house-rules for using computers, tablets and games, such as abiding by recommended age-ratings; but we have recently been asked by some of our families for further tips and ideas to enhance e-safety, so here are a few we recommend – just click on the links. We would also like to share what we do in school to help set down those early good habits for safe and successful internet use, so do check out our Hunsley Primary SafeAPPS rules and see whether your child knows them!

So if you have any good-practice tips you think are worth sharing, please do spread the word by letting us know at enquiries@hunsleyprimary.org.uk or by attending our e-safety ParentLearn in July.
